Cosmopolitan readers queue for tube job MORE than 1,400 readers of Cosmopolitan have applied to become a London Tube train driver. London Underground described the response to its single advert in this month 's issue as " exceptional".

Successful applicants will have to get out of bed for regular 4.45am starts, but the £27,650 salary and up to eight weeks' holiday may prove sufficient compensation.

Lorraine Candy, the magazine's editor, said the interest her readers had shown in the advert demonstrated that young women were not bound by traditional career patterns (no longer respected traditional career boundaries)

She said: "It's always been a classic thing for boys to want to be train drivers. Now we're seeing that girls can do it too". "I don't think the job is boring or unsexy. and I'm sure the passengers couldn't care less whether the train is being driven by a man or a woman -as long as it's on time." The ability to break bad news to travellers more sympathetically is one reason London Underground is keen to increase its number of female drivers from 100 -just three percent of driving staff.
